Biomass

It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World. European consumption patterns are already responsible for over a third of global deforestation which is bad news for the climate, biodiversity and forest dependent communities. And yet the UK and Europe have now decided to burn trees to create electricity. Why are policy makers ignoring the advice of their own scientists which says this will be worse for climate change than burning coal? Where might millions upon millions of tonnes of trees come from and what impacts might this have for exacerbating land grabs and land conflicts?

Featuring:

- * Rachel Smolker, Biofuelwatch US, Energy Justice Network
- * Harry Huyton, Head of climate and energy policy, RSPB
- * Almuth Erming, Biofuelwatch UK
- * Giuseppe Nastasi, legal advisor at Client Earth

Mopomoso's 25th anniversary afternoon sessions continue with three very different sets from the wonderful world of free improvisation.

John Rangecroft (sax) / Dave Tucker (guitar) / Marcio Mattos (bass) / Mark Sanders (drums) quartet

Highly respected reedsman Rangecroft, here on tenor saxophone, leading his own quartet which promises melodic and rhythmic invention of a high calibre. With three of the UK's finest providing a propulsive energy, a great way to open proceedings.

Henry Lowther (trumpet) / John Russell (guitar) duo

The last set of the Mopomoso Red Rose series was played by this long standing partnership. A poised and very open duo who are unaverse to risk taking while sharing a mutual respect and understanding for each other's music. Their regular trio with violinist Satoko Fukuda plays later in the year so this is a rare chance to catch these two fine musicians in a duo.
